ORVAL IMEL LAYS KILLING BLAME ON JASPER MOUNTAIN*Aged Mountaineer Fired First At Nephew, Eye-Witness Tells Jury.*TESTIMONY CONFLICTING*Stories of Imel and Father Directly at Variance With Those Told By Bruce Donaldson and Tom Flynn; Case May Extend Into Next Week.*Testimony corroborating the story told by his father, Grant Imel, in the case in which Jasper Mountain is charged with the murder of his uncle, Jasper Mountain, in Springfield township, January 25, was given today by Orval Imel who was still on the stand at noon in the trial before Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen in Uniontown. He denied any stone had been thrown at the aged man and declared Jasper Mountain started firing at Meade who returned the first killing the old man.*Orval testified that when Jasper asked, "Where is the man who stole the hearse," Meade retorted with the interrogation, "Where is the man who fed his own mother's cow glass—the only cow that she had?" Later, as the argument between the two grew more heated, Orval said they cursed each other, "casting up about women." By that time, he said, Jasper had backed down to the wagon of coal he had been driving. Meade moved to the rear of the wagon and then made a dash for the quarry, shouting that his uncle was drawing a gun. Meade, he said, leaped into the quarry and then out at the side and got behind a pile of quarried stone. Jasper Mountain, he said, fired twice at Meade and the latter returned shooting five times.*Jasper, the witness said, fell backward and lay still; his face upturned. Grant Imel, his father, walked to the body and ascertained that he was dead. Orval said he also walked to the spot. Blood was streaming over his face, he said. This latter evidence corroborates what the commonwealth has been seeking to establish, namely that Jasper Mountain was struck in the head by a stone.
Orval denied testimony given by Bruce Donaldson.*The prospect at noon was that the case would extend into next week. Fully 100 persons from the township are in attendance at the trial and it is expected many of them will be called in one capacity or another, many as character witnesses.*Conflicting testimony will be before the jury in rendering a verdict in the case. Two witnesses for the commonwealth, Bruce Donaldson and Thomas Flynn, testified that they saw Jasper Mountain killed at the hands of the defendant after Orval Imel had stopped his team of horses near the James Mountain stone quarry, and Grant Imel had knocked him from his seat on the wagon with a stone. Grant Imel, son of Orval, and Isaac Cumberland, witnesses for the defense, hold that defendant shot and killed Jasper Mountain after he had pointed a gun at the men working at the stone quarry and especially the defendant and that the shooting was in self-defense. The defense called a number of character witnesses.*Grant Imel testified that he had a contract with James Mountain, father of the defendant, to quarry stone for him and that he, his son, Orval, George Smith and Isaac Cumberland, were quarrying stone on the afternoon of January 27, last, when the shooting took place near the quarry. Meade Mountain, he said, was sitting on a pile of stones when Jasper Mountain, with a load of coal, had stopped. Coming over to the quarry he said Mr. Mountain asked him if his wife was a good woman. Mrs. Imel had taken the men's dinner to them, and was still at the quarry when Jasper approached.*Jasper continued: "I can't understand why you have so much help and don't have any." Addressing Jasper Mountain he said, "Where is the man that stole the hearse?" and the defendant answered that he did not know. Imel said they engaged Continued on Page Two.*FAYETTE TEAM WINS FIRST HONOR JUDGING SWINE AT STATE MEET*Walter Fretts, Masontown, Has the Highest Individual Score in Contest.*By Associated Press.*STATE COLLEGE, June 24.—Fayette county won the swine judging contest in the girl and boy club events here yesterday, Walter Fretts of Masontown was high scorer. Increased Pay for Mine Inspectors Is Held Up at Harrisburg

HARRISBURG, June 21.—Pennsylvania miners inspectors are having a hard time getting their increased pay, or in fact any pay at all, this month. The last Legislature increased their salaries from $4,500 to $4,800 and to get it the inspectors must, according to people here, resign their offices and be reappointed. None of them has done so as yet.

Until this is done they will get no increases, but it is feared that their regular pay may also be held up, owing to the fact that when Governor Sprague pruned the general appropriation bill he cut $18,000 off the salary item and the clerks at the department offices figured out what was left would not reach until the end of the two-year period. So they held it up for advice. And the inspectors are without pay.

in a quarrel, casting up different things at each other one of which was that Jasper had Meade had sworn to a lie at Square Minerd's office.

Meade asked him what and how about the lie and they dwelt on this subject for some time and Jasper tried to explain by reading a part of the form of an oath. They had got a short distance away from him by this time and he heard Mrs. Minerd screaming and Mead yelling "It's pulling a gun on me he's pulling a gun on me," and Mead ran across the road and jumped into a hole crouching down in it and Jasper continued in that direction pointing a gun.

Great said he called for him not to shoot in the hole and leaped out and fell on his face. As he was rising Jasper was down the slope a few feet and level headed two shots fired from Jasper's direction, followed by four or five shots from behind him or in the direction of the defendant. Imel said Jasper staggered backward and fell on his right shoulder and then straightened out and he ran to him immediately and feeling his pulse saw that he was dead.

As he staggered backward he said Jasper dropped his gun and exclaimed:

"You have ruined me" and Meade said "I have killed the poor old man. I am sorry of it but I had to do it."

He said James Mountain, father of the defendant, was the first to arrive on the scene after the shooting and he told Yeade to go up to the house.

Shortly afterwards William Burkhardt came along the road in a wagon traveling east. Imel and he remained with the dead man until the authorities arrived.

For the benefit of others who are suffering from the effects of influenza
I want to tell of the benefits I have received from 'Tonic' said P. R.
Grib, 147 Liberty street, Butler. "In February I had an attack of the 'flu' that came over making a wreck of me. I couldn't eat anything but what caused me such awful pain
that I could hardly stand it."

"My food would ferment and gas pressured my heart so as to almost cut off my breath. My nerves were so shattered that I felt on needles all the time and least thing out of the ordinary would upset me.

"I got up in the mornings so tired out that I could hardly make it to the station to catch my train to work, and that druggy, sluggish feeling stayed with me all day.

"Three bottles of Tonic have made me feel just like a brand-new man. I am eating just anything I want and haven't a pain or a sign of indisposition. I am able to do as much work as the best man in my crew, and no matter how hard I work I don't get all tired out and short of breath.

"I sleep well every night and get up energetic with strength and energy that makes work a pleasure. Just give me Tonic and you can have all the other medicines, for there's something about it that certainly does the work."—Advertisement.

COCHRAN-ROBY WEDDING MOST BRILLIANT ONE

Mountain laurel, palms and ferns made a pretty background for the wedding of Miss Agnes Grace Bell
Cochran, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Cochran of Morgantown, W. Va., and Clarence Roby of Petersburg, whose marriage was solemnized
Tuesday, June 21, at 4 o'clock in the First Methodist Episcopal church of Morgantown, with Rev. W. E.
Lowther officiating. Lavender and pink flowers in large baskets were used in the chancel and white satin ribbon outlined the path of the wedding party.

When Mrs. Grace Martin Sue began to play beautiful wedding music from Lobengrin the bridesmaids and ushers came down the center aisle, followed by the maid of honor, the ring-bearer
and flower girl immediately preceding the bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Philip Cochran. They were met at the altar
by the bridegroom and his brother, Howard Roby, who served as his best man. Dr. Lowther having entered from the vestry room.

The beautiful double ring ceremony
of the Methodist church was used.
The bride's gown of heavy satin brocade with court train was trimmed with pink lace and veil of the same lace was caught back with pearls, which were the gift of Philip Cochran. She wore the bridegroom's gift, a necklace of pearls.

The ring-bearer, Paul McKeel, Jr., wore a white sailor suit and little Miss Ann McKeel, in a pink and white dress, scattered Dorothy Perkins roses
in the aisle in front of the bridal party.

Miss Georgia Wade, as maid of honor, was gowned in lavender taffeta and pink organdie with picture hat in the same shade. She carried a bouquet of snapdragon, rose and delphinium.

The bridesmaids, Miss Ettie Anderson,
Miss Cora Harris and Miss Margaret Thomas, made a pretty picture in gowns of pink taffeta and lavender organdie made in director style with trimmings of valenciennes lace and organza rosebuds. Miss Regina Cochran, the fourth bridesmaid, wore a pink dress with hat to match. They carried bouquets of snapdragon, delphinium and sweetpeas.

Mr. Roby's friends who served as ushers were: James Offutt Lakin of Charleston; George Cochran of Dawn-ton; Joseph Boyd of Parkersburg and William Cochran of Morgantown.
They were presented with sterling silver belt buckles by Mr. Roby.

The auditorium was filled with the friends of the families including members of the order of the White Shrine who attended in a body, all wearing white. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Cochran home.

The guests were received by Mrs.
Gertrude Cochran, whose gown was cream satin, with trimmings of jet and rose; Mrs. A. A. Roby, wearing a gown of soft gray silk, and the bride and bridegroom.

The table for the bridal party which was in the dining room was surrounded by a large wedding cake surrounded by flowers and bearing a dove which held two wedding rings in its beak. These rings were thrown to the maids by the bride when the cake was cut and were caught by Miss Margaret Thomas and George Cochran.

JUDGE LANDIS SHOWS WISDOM BY CULTIVATING BALL STARS

Judge Landis and Tris Speaker Chatting on Players' Bench.

Judge Landis shows the right idea to wanting to make the personal acquaintance of every ball player in the major leagues. If he is to be the high priest of baseball he ought to know the men whose destinies he is to rule and he shows his wisdom by getting acquainted with them. He goes to either the Cubs' or White Sox park in Chicago every day and visits the bench of both the home team and the visitors and chats with the players. In this way he gets to know what manner of men he has to deal with, writes H. C. Walker in the Detroit Times.

It is likely that Judge Landis will become popular with the players and he has already won their respect. He doesn't want his presence to awe any of the players and so he gets acquainted with them to prove to them

THE SOISON.

"THE SILVER LINING"—The feature attraction today and tomorrow, founded upon actual occurrences, Jewel Carmen, supported by a cast of Broadway notables, is seen in the stellar role. In addition to the galaxy of stars the picture has the exceptional feature of displaying several original dances by the internationally famous artists, Carl Fisher and Dorothy Dickson. [The story deals with the tantalizing theory of heredity and the audacious plot with its tense situations unfolded in creating manner demonstrates in a vivid way that there are startling exceptions to every rule of life and love. The alluring story portrayed in "The Silver Linings" is a picturization of actual occurrences which came to the notice of Mr. West. The original character in this pulsing story, whose doleful defiance of all laws and gay disregard for the inevitable, brought a sudden termination to their carefully laid plans, are now widely scattered and living lives far different from the days when the Silver Linings seemed very remote.]

In the character of "The Angel," the heroine of the picture, bewitching Jewel Carmen portrays for the screen the hectic existence of the one time belle of the former law breakers of the social underworld.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE BEACH OF DREAMS"—A five-reel picture of real entertainment worth, with well known players appearing in the leading roles, is the feature attraction today and tomorrow. The second episode, "The Pool's Play," of "The Purple Riders," a thrilling serial, is also included. Joe Ryan is seen in the stellar role. This smashing western serial might well be a Bret Harte masterpiece writ in celluloid; a quivering cross-section of one great phase of American life snatched from one section of one dazzling period and reflected by the magic mirror of the screen to a public which has never tired of western serials well done. It is founded on a master personality of one man, its hero, Dick Lane, no prettier half-nude, but a man with the smell of saddle-leather about him and the prairie-scent in his fearless blue eyes. Dick Ringer, sheriff, cattlemen, horseman, dauntless, lighter and dead shot. No "super" in his manhood, but the king of his kind.

THE ORPHEUM.

"THE ROUND UP"—In which Roscoe Ates, the famous comedian, has the role of a sheriff, is being shown today and will also be the feature attraction tomorrow.

Dick Lane goes out prospecting, leaving the girl he loves in the care of Jack Payton, his best friend. Dick strikes it rich, but on his way back is robbed and tortured by a band of Indians. He is found and taken by friends to a hospital. He report comes home that he is dead. Jack woos and wins the girl and the wedding date is set. A short time after, Jack says he is alive, and enclosing another letter for the girl. It is then that Jack sacrifices honor for love, tears up the letter and withdraws from the girl the news that her former lover still lives.

The picture is also filled with excellent comedy—thanks to Roscoe Ates, who, by arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck, stars in the role of Slim Hoover, the fat sheriff, the role that was essayed in the stage production by Maclyn Arbuckle. Mabel Julienne Scott plays opposite the star.

CHAPTER III.

The Duel.

The journey to Dublin was made by the Caulhous, their two guests, and Michael Cleane, without incident of note. Arrived there, Miles Caulhoun gave himself to examination by government officials and to assisting the designs of the Peep-o'-Day Boys; and indeed he was present at the formation of the first Orange Lodge.

His narrow nature, his potty craft and malice, were useful in a time of anxiety for the state. Yet he had not enough ability to develop his position by the chances offered him. He had not a touch of genius; he had only bursts of Celtic passion, which he had not mind enough to control.

Indeed, as days, weeks and months went on, his position became less valuable to himself, and his financial affairs suffered from his own and his agents' bad management. In his particular district, he was a power; in Dublin, he soon showed the weaker side of his nature. He had a bad habit of making foes where he could easily have made friends. In his personal habits he was sober, but erratic.

Dyck had not his father's abstention from the luxuries of life. He drank, he gambled, he went where temptation was, and fell into it. He steadily diminished his powers of resistance to self-indulgence until one day, at a tavern, he met a man who made a great impression upon him.

This man was brilliant, brilliant, full of humor, character and life, knowing apparently all the lower world of Dublin and moving with an assured step. It was Eris Boyne, the divorced husband of Mrs. Lynn, and the father of Sheila Lynn; but this fact was not known to Dyck. There was also a chance of its not becoming known, because so many years had passed since Eris Boyne was divorced.

One day Eris Boyne said to Dyck: "There's a supper tonight at the Breakneck club. Come along and have a skifull. You'll meet people worth knowing."

"The Breakneck club isn't a good name for first-class institution," remarked Dyck, with a pause and a laugh; "but I'll come, if you'll fetch me."

Eris Boyne, who was eighteen years older than Dyck, laughed, flicked a little pinch of snuff at his nose with his finger.

"Dear lad, of course I'll come and fetch you," he said. "There's many a man has done worse than lead a gay scripling like you into pleasant ways. Bring along any loose change you have; for it may be a night of nights. It's the best place to come to ever an honest man had."

"Are they all the right sort?" asked Dyck, with a little touch of malice. "I mean, they're loyal and true!"

Eris Boyne laid a hand on Dyck's arm.

"Come and find out. Do you think I'd lead you into bad company? Of course Eimmet and Wolfe Tone won't be there, nor any of that lot; but there'll be some men of the right stamp." He watched Dyck carefully out of the corner of his eye. "It's funny," he added, "that in Ireland the word 'loyal' means being true to the Union Jack, standing by King George and his crowd."

"Well, what would you have?" said Dyck. "For this is a day and age when being loyal to the king is more than might else in all the Irish world. We're never two days alike, we Irish. There are the United, Irishmen and the Defenders on one side, and the Peep-o'-Day Boys' or Orangemen, on the other—Catholic and Protestant, at each other's throats. Then there's a hand thrust in and up goes the sword, and the rifles, pikes and bayonets; and those that were ready to invite or kill each other fall into each other's arms."

Eris Boyne laughed. "Well, there'll be an end to that. The Irish parliament is slipping into disrepute. It wouldn't surprise me if the astute English bring them into a union; to the ruin of Irish independence. Yet maybe, before that comes, the French will have a try for power here." He came a step nearer, his voice lowered a little. "I have heard the latest news from France? They're coming with a good sized fleet down to the south coast. Have you heard it?"

"Oh, there's plenty we hear; one doesn't believe it gospel," answered Dyck, his eyes half closing. "I'm not believing all I hear, as if it was a prayer-meeting. Anything may happen here; Ireland's a woman—very uncertain."

Dyck kicked some dust from his waistcoat, and dropped his eyes, because he was thinking of two women he had known; one of them an angel now in company of her sister angels—his mother; the other a girl he had met on the hills of Connemara, a wonderfully pretty girl of seventeen. How should he know that the girl was Eris Boyne's daughter?—although, there were times when some pictures of Boyne's some quick looks were lifting at the eyebrows, bringing back the memory of Sheila Lynn, as it did now.

Since Dyck left his old home he had seen her twice; once at Leyland town, and once at her home in Limerick. That time, he had spent with her had been very brief, but full of life, interest and pleasure. He had been at Leyland twice, at his mother's house, to luncheon, there were lots of fun, whiskers in her eyes, something she never had. She was the most natural being, the finest Dame I ever saw. He routine. He had to consider the chance of never leaving the grounds alive; yet in the trees made good footing for the work to be done, the thrill of the geyser, the sound of the birds, the flick of a lizard across the path, and the distant gay snap of a young deer, brought to his senses a gust of joyous feeling. He was not mad; he was submerged. He was in the great, consuming atmosphere of the bigger world and the greater life. He even did not hate Mallow at the moment. The thought about to be done was to him a test of manhood. It was a call upon the courage of the soul, a challenge of life, strength and will.

As Mallow entered the grounds, the thoughts of Sheila Lynn crossed Dyck's mind, and the mental sight of her gladdened the eyes of his soul. For one brief instant he stood lost in the mind's look; then he stepped forward, saluted, shook hands with Mallow, and doffed his coat and waistcoat.

As he did so, he was conscious of a curious coldness, even of dampness, in the hand which had shaken that of Mallow. Mallow's hand had a clammy touch—clammy, but firm and sure. There was no tremor in the long, thin fingers nor at the tips—the thin, acetic tips, as of a secret service man—but in his eyes was a dark line of purpose. The morning had touched him, but not as it had thrown over Dyck its mantle of peace. Mallow also had enjoyed the smell and feeling of it all, but with this difference—it had filled him with such material joy that he could not bear the thought of leaving it. It gave him strength of will, which would add security to his arm and wrist.

The Time Had Come for Something Definitely.

Dyck had learned swordsmanship with as skilled a master as Ireland had known, and he had shown, in getting knowledge of the weapon, a natural instinct for a weapon worthy of the highest purpose. He had learned the sword since he was six, and his play was better than that of most men; but this was, in fact, his first real duel. Many times, of course, in the process of his training, he had fought as men fight in duels, but with this difference—that now he was permitted to stab or kill in toe.

Physically, there was not a vast difference between the two men. Mallow was lank and tall, nervously self-contained, finely concentrated, and vigorous. Dyck was broad of shoulder, well set up, muscular, and with a steely-eyed eye than that of his foe. Also, in the combat developed, it was clear that he had a hand to steady his eye. What was more, his wrist had superb strength and flexibility; it was an enduring and vital as the forearm and ankle of a tiger. As a pair they were certainly nimble, and would give a good account of themselves.

The two men fighting had almost the air of gladiators. Their coats were off, and the white linen of their shirts looked gracious; while the raised left hand of the fighters balancing the sword-thrust and the weight of the body had an almost singular beauty. Of the two, Dyck was the more graceful, the stouter, the quicker in his motions. His momentary vision of Sheila Lynn remained with him—not as vision, rather as a warmth in his bosom, being something which made him intensely alert, cheerful, defiant, exactly critical.

He had need of all his skill, for Mallow was set to win the fight. He felt instinctively what was working in Dyck's mind. He had fought a number of duels, and with a certain trick or art he had given the end to the lives of several. He became cautious, however, that Dyck had a particular stroke in mind, which he himself was preventing by unskillful methods. It might be one thing or another, but in view of Dyck's training it would perhaps be the Enniscorthy touch.

Again and again Dyck pressed his antagonist backward, seeking to muddle his defense and to clear an opening for his own deadly stroke; but the other man also was a master, and parried successfully.

Presently, with a quick move, Mallow took the offensive, and tried to unseat Dyck's pose and disorganize his battle-plan. For an instant the tempestuous action, the brilliant, swift play of the sword, the quivering flippancy of the steel, gave Dyck that which almost disconcerted him. Yet he had a grip of himself, and was fortunate to preserve his defense intact; though once his enemy's sword caught his left shoulder, making it bleed. The seconds, however, decided that the thrust was not serious, and made no attempt to interrupt the combat.

Dyck's tactics changed. Once again he became aggressive, and he drove his foe to a point where the skill of both men was tried to the uttermost; it was clear the time had come for something definite. Suddenly Dyck threw himself back with an eagle step, lunged slightly to one side, and then in a gallant fury got the steel point into the scutellum of his enemy. That was the Enniscorthy stroke, which had been taught him by William Tandy, the expert swordman, and had been made famous by Lord Wall-

BRADY THINKS CARPENTIER WILL BE NEXT HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION

"Carpentier, in my opinion, will be the next heavyweight champion of the world," said William A. Brady during a chat the other day. "He surely will defeat Jack Dempsey in the big bout on July 2, and it will not surprise me if he turns the trick in less than three or four rounds."

"Dempsey isn't so formidable as he was when he won the title from Willard. He was comparatively slow when he boxed Brennan in Madison Square Garden. In the Frenchman he will meet a wonderful fighter—the greatest boxer since Jim Corbett's time. Carpenter not only is scientific, but he is a powerful blitzer and the quickset thinker in the ring today."

"When these boys follow each other, it will be a hard fight," said Carpenter, "but I am confident that Carpenter's clever defenses

Eats Like a Wood Chopper

"After many discouraging years of suffering from stomach trouble and bleeding in which I could eat only sparingly of the simplest food, I am now feeling entirely well. Thanks to May's Wonderful Remedy which has done wonders for me, I can now eat like a wood chopper and enjoy it."

"Well, you got it home," he said to Dyck. "And it's mighty done."

"I did my best," answered Dyck. "Give me your hand, if you will."

With a wry look Mallow now seated his old stump of a tree, held out his left hand. It was covered with blood.

"I think we'll have to forego that courtesy, Calhoun," he said. "Look at the state of my hand! It's good blood," he added grimly. "It's d—d good blood, but—but it won't do, you see."
